WEE JAMIE.

(Inscribed to Mrs. J. W. Irwin.)

Wee Jamie's my own little brother, Just a wee teentsy bit of a boy. Too little to notice the pictures And too little to play with a toy. His eyes are as blue as the violets

Which in spring-time their petals unclose, And sure there can be nothing sweeter Than his dear, little, restless, pink toes. His laugh is the sweetest of music, And I think he's as "cute" as can be

When cuddling up close and so cunning While I sing him a soft lullaby. Not even one tooth has wee Jamie, But his lips are as sweet as a rose Could bees just for once sip their sweetness

They'd not leave for a flower that blows. A dear mother-bird would be sorry If, to make her sweet birdlings a bed, She had but the threads short and silken That are growing on Jamie's wise head.

For, if to her nest in the willow She could carry each stran of his hair, There'd be just three hairs to a pillow For the five little nestlings in there.

A mocking-bird came 'round one evening, Not to serenade Jamie and me, But to catch some sweet notes for his medley From dear Jamie's sweet laugh, full of glee.

No doubt you have noticed, this mimick Has new notes in his blithe trills this Spring. They're notes that he caught from wee Jamie And the mocking-bird feels like a king.

No wonder, for tho' of all songsters He can warble the loveliest note, 'I is clear that he sings, now, the sweeter, And more proudly swells out his full throat.

I never do think it a bother When my Mama calls, often, to me, "Here Gertrude come take little Jamie." But then he's my brother you see—

And maybe you'd think him a nuisance. But no, I don't think that you could. For tho' he's not your little brother, He is ever and ever so good.
